

The Harp Seal

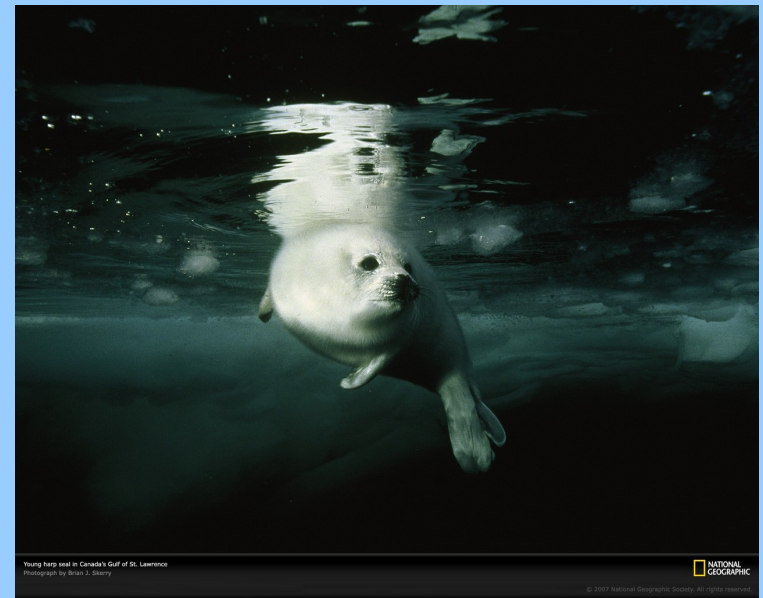

The harp seal lives in the North of the earth, in the polar zone.

The harp seal lives in the blue parts

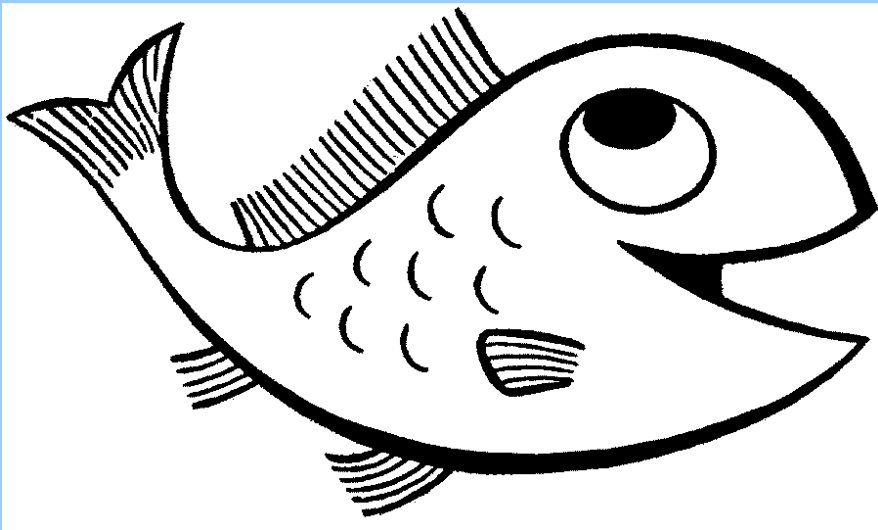

It has fins to live in the water and lungs to breathe in the air. It can stay fifteen minutes under the water.

The harp seal lives in the polar zone, that's why the baby seals have a thick white fur. In adulthood, it resists to very low temperatures thanks to its thick skin.

The harp seal eats fishes and crustaceans.

It has teeth.